Taking charge of your career

DR CHARLOTTE HURRY

Centre Manager - OPTIMA

How are you uniquely qualified to build a rewarding career out of your interests, skills, and experience? What can you do to expand your current skill set? What job do you want to do next? As a researcher navigating the early stages of your career, your answers to these questions may shift with time. Therefore, it's critical for you to periodically re-evaluate and define your goals, and plan your route to success. In two webinars, Dr Charlotte Hurry will guide you through the process of proactively managing your career by identifying your transferable skills, what you need from a job and what steps you can take to advance your career. It is now time to proactively manage your future career.

Requirements: This training takes place over two one hour webinars with a 30-minute pre-work session. You will be expected to interact during the Zoom sessions, please connect with sound and camera. Registration required here.
